II.

Tho' the shadows deepen and the nights appall,
Tho' we may be tasting of life's bitter gall;
Still a deep assurance like a dawn so fair
Comes like golden sunrise showing God is there.

III.

Blessed is the soul who on his God relies,
He shall soon be singing, gone his mournful sighs.
Things that seem to hinder as we onward plod
Only help to draw us nearer unto God.

IV.

O the joy of serving One we love so well!
O the peace of trusting more than tongue can tell!
Ever safely sheltered from all fear and harm,
Guided every moment by His mighty arm.
