

The Blood of the Crucified One

James McKim, 1910.

Charles Gabriel.

There is joy in the heart of the one who is saved
By the blood of the Crucified One;
There is peace in the soul driving all doubts away,
When we trust in the Crucified One;
And we love all the world, when our will is the will
Of the Christ who for sinners hath died:
Then to Heaven look up, trust in God and obey,
As in Jesus you sweetly confide.

Refrain

Oh the blood of the Crucified One,
The precious blood of Jesus!
Making perfectly whole,
'Tis the hope of the soul,
The precious blood of Jesus.

Oh, what joy it will be my Redeemer to see,
For I trust in the Crucified One;
I shall sing with the angels the song of the Lamb,
At the last when life's journey is done;
For redemption's complete, and God's grace make me whole
By the death of His infinite Son;
When the conflict is o'er, on that heavenly shore
I shall worship the Crucified One.

Refrain

There's no love that compares with God's wonderful love,
And Christ Jesus for all doth atone;
God looked down from on high, from His throne in the sky,
And, in pity beholding His own,
Saw His sheep gone astray turned earth's darkness to day,
For our Savior is greater than all,
And His mercy is free, there is pardon for me
Oh, He hears every penitent's call!

Refrain

Then rejoice, O my soul, in a dear Savior's love,
From the bondage of sin I am free;
It is glory to walk with my Savior each day,
And to feel there is pardon for me.
Oh, the joy and the peace that obedience hath won!
Never tongue half the transport can sing;
Blest the soul that is free, glad in God's liberty,
Shout the glory of Jesus our king!
