

Ten Little Craft Unions

By: Bertram L. Weber

Ten little craft unions working in a mine.
One went on strike, and then there were nine.

Nine little craft unions all digging slate.
One made a contract; then there were eight.

Eight little craft unions work for hours eleven.
One struck for shorter hours; then there were seven.

Seven little craft unions all making bricks.
One got black-listed; then there were six.

Six little craft unions trying to keep alive.
One scabbed on all the rest; then there were five.

Five little craft unions working in a store.
One wasn't recognized; then there were four.

Four little craft unions, good as they could be.
One wasn't good enough; then there were three.

Three little craft unions working in a crew.
One committed mutiny; then there were two.

Two little craft unions, both on the run.
One lost its treasury; then there was one.

One little craft union, fighting all alone.
Some businessmen bought it; then there was none.
