

She's Turning 50 Today
Album: Keep on Loving You
Reba McEntire

Her husband left on Saturday,
for a woman that was half her age.
Sunday she just stayed in bed,
with the covers pulled over her head.

But on Monday morning she woke up,
and loaded up her pick-up truck.
Took one last look at her old life,
then hit the gas, and said goodbye
in her faded jeans and her old baseball cap.
All she knows for sure, she ain't comin back.

This isn't how she thought
she'd ever spend this day:
sitting behind the wheel, on the interstate.
40 was quite alright,
but she's changing roads tonight.
and it's such a bittersweet way to celebrate.
She's turning 50 today.

She left that Oklahoma town,
the only world she had know till now,
And memories of those 20 years.
She watched them in her rear-view mirror fade away
oh, but thats all right.
Yeah, this could be the time of her life.

This isn't how she thought
she'd ever spend this day:
sitting behind the wheel, on the interstate.
40 was quite alright,
but she's changing roads tonight
and it's such a bittersweet way to celebrate.
She's turning 50 today.

Oh, her windows are down.
And the wind blows her hair
Where she goes, could be anywhere.

40 was quite alright,
but she's changing roads tonight
tomorrow's a mystery,
oh, and she can't wait.
She's turning 50,
She's turning 50,
She's turning 50 today.
