And he says I love you

She looks at him from across
All the other bedrooms she's been lost in Suddenly scared because
She can't see his face at all
Until he speaks out loud
And he say I love you

She takes his arm and holds it tight
And wishes he'd turn out the hall light
And says for the second time that night
You sure say funny things
But she's not laughing then
And he says I love you

And he never say Because
And who does he think that he is ?
And she says You don't know all
and he says I know , I know

Later on she shuts the bathroom door
Wondering what it is he likes her for
The water sure is nice and warm
She tries to think and can't
Of what he might have meant
When he said I love you

And he never says Because
And who does he think that he is ?
and she says You don't know all

And he says I know, I know
