

Folk & Traditional Song Lyrics

www.traditionalmusic.co.uk

Computer Love Song

Computer Love Song

from an album called "Love songs for the 21st Century"

Hark to my tale of a very tragic love so grievous to relate

Two star-crossed lovers with the perfect love they could not consummate

Their love was constant, their love was true but of passion it was devoid

For he was a univac mark II
and she was an XF-I humanoid

She gazed at him and a tear was in her eye to her love was denied

Her lover stood four mighty stories high and he was one block wide

How could they do the impossible how could their love be enjoyed

For he was a univac mark II
and she was an XF-I humanoid

Then each to each on wavelengths ultra high They whispered secretly

Of transistors and gears and shifts and cams and printed circuitry

So time passed for the two of them in the place where they were employed

For he was a univac mark II
and she was an XF-I humanoid

Then hush your sobs, my pretty little miss and dry those oily tears

You know that robots can't afford to cry it surely rusts their gears

You must give up all these thoughts of love though it leaves you an aching void

Give up this Univac Mark II and find you an XM-I humanoid

SOF