Tell Me You Are Mine.

Copyright, 1877, by Stephen Massett.

Look into my eyes, dear,
And tell me you are mine,
No other glance can charm me
Like that fond look of thine.
Look deep into my eyes, love.
And sweet your vows shall be,
As bright tipped crested wavelets
That crisp the Summer sea.

The breeze upon the mountain
Bathed in the morning dew.
Is not more pure, my darling,
Than is my love for you.
So whatever may betide thee,
Whatever fate is mine,
While life lasts you are mine, love.
And I am ever thine.
